Remember to Feed Your Piggy Bank

Every day you hear a new reason to save your money; the sooner you start saving the longer you have to save, save now and you'll have the money to buy something really big later.

But you still can't seem to remember to feed your piggy bank. One way to remind yourself is to create motivation. Here are a few ways to motivate yourself so you will remember to feed that bank!

1. Set a Goal. Decide what it is you want to buy with the money you've saved. This way you'll remember to keep saving because you know the end result will be whatever it is you want to buy.

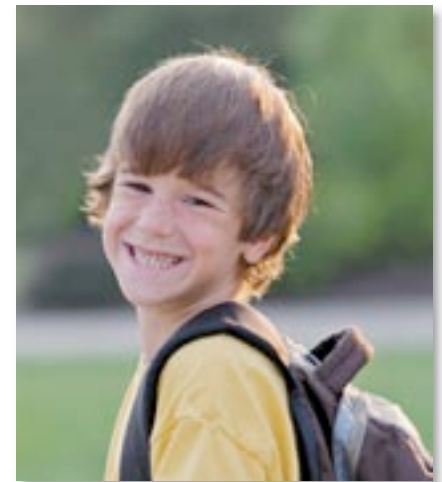

2. Ask Your Parents to Help. Talk to your parents about reminding you to save. Maybe they can give you a small reward every time you remember like an extra $.50 towards your goal!

3. Hang a Picture. Hang a picture of your goal behind your piggy bank to help motivate you to put more money in your bank.

4. Save Every Time you have Money. Make it a habit to put at least part of your money in your bank every time you have some. For example, if you get a weekly allowance, ask your parents to help you figure out how much 10% of your allowance is and put that amount in your bank.

5. Make a Weekly Deposit in your MCT Savings Account.

Depositing your piggy bank money to your savings account every week gives you a short-term goal because you have to make sure you have money in your piggy bank to make the deposit. Also, depositing into your savings account can help you save because it can add interest to your balance.
